National Science Foundation (NSF) CAREER Award

The NSF Faculty Early Career Development Program \(CAREER\) provides five years of funding to early-career faculty who have the potential to serve as academic role models in research and education and to lead advances in the mission of their department or organization. The application deadline this year is July 24, 2024. Faculty interested in applying to this program may register for an informational webinar taking place on May 20, 2024, which will allow for questions to be answered during the presentation. Presentation slides and a recording from a webinar held on May 3 are also available for viewing. Faculty will also find useful templates, checklists, video guides, and more on the Office of the Vice President for Research and Innovation's NSF resources webpages. Please contact Research Development Services to request substantive feedback on applications before submission.

NSF Institutional Fact Sheet

The NSF just released a new data tool for the public on its NSF by the Numbers website. The Institutional Fact Sheet provides summary information about individual institutions and their recent history with the NSF including institutional funding rate trends, the number of PIs and Co-PIs on awards, awards by NSF managing directorate, most recent new awards, and largest currently active awards. To access the University of Oregon's Fact Sheet, click on the "Institutional Fact Sheet" link on the website's main page, click on the filter symbol in the upper right of the subsequent webpage, and then select "University of Oregon Eugene" using the dropdown box.
