National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) American Repartition Initiative

Arts Magazine: America's First Field Fund. Panel and report form a wide-ranging special initiative at the NEH assessing the country's great trove of unique stories surrounding a range of disciplines and projects. This new initiative is one of the most ambitious humanities initiatives ever undertaken by the NEH and it supports the initiative through new funding opportunities that aim to elevate the role of culture in society and in all corners of the United States. The program invites applications from institutions and individuals interested in humanities research to examine themes in its own right. The initiative enables the pursuit of projects of independent cultural significance that promotes diverse voices in the cultural landscape and supports the development of new works or the repurposing of existing ones. It allows for the development of ideas and the potential to amplify connections with parallel partner organizations in order to ensure the sustainability and success of the initiative.
