NIH Academy Training Program for Early-Career Faculty
The Office of the Vice President of Research and Innovation (OVPRI) seeks to boost the success of early-career researchers applying to the National Institutes of Health (NIH) by launching its first-ever NIH Academy. This comprehensive training program will enhance the competitiveness of NIH submissions among early career scholars at the UO. The OVPRI requests applications from tenure-track assistant professors and research assistant professors to create a training cohort of 6-8 faculty for the 2024-25 academic year. All participants will be expected to prepare and submit an NIH R01 (or similar size) application in June 2025. Faculty members who would like to participate in this training program must apply by June 14, 2024. Please visit the NIH Academy website to learn more about this program, and join us for an informational webinar on Thursday, May 30 at 1:00 p.m. Direct any questions you have to Research Development Services.

Changes to National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Stipends Program – Webinar Rescheduled
The National Endowment for the Humanities has announced changes to the Summer Stipends program and will host a webinar on July 10, 2024, starting at 11:00 a.m. to discuss the funding opportunity. Registration for this event is required. The Summer Stipend is a limited submission program, hence UO faculty interested in applying are required to submit a pre-proposal for an internal competition. An announcement regarding this internal competition will be published in a subsequent newsletter following the anticipated release of the solicitation in mid-June.
