

University of Oregon
Team Rules

Project:

Project Supervisor:

Work undertaken in this Project is subject to contractual reporting, intellectual property, and licensing obligations to University research sponsors and licensees. As a condition of participation in the Project, you agree to cooperate with the University through the Project Supervisor(s) in fulfilling its obligations under these and any similar University contracts pertaining to work in this Project. Depending on the circumstances, your work may be determined to be work made for hire and owned by the University, or the University may request that you assign ownership of the work, and any patents, copyrights, or other rights, to the University. You agree to execute such assignments as requested by the University.

In work for this Project you agree not to include code, pictures, content, ideas, or other material that you think might be subject to patent, copyright, trademark, rights of publicity or trade secret claims by others (whether or not at the University) unless you have approval from the Project Supervisor.

The University encourages publication of innovative work by students, staff and faculty. However, the University through this Project also has contractual obligations and distribution goals that constrain the manner and timing of publications and work product relating to this Project. You agree to obtain approval from the Project Supervisor prior to distributing or publishing work in order to meet the University's contractual obligations and the long-term goals of the Project.

If these Team Rules are acceptable to you, please sign below to indicate your concurrence.
