Women's Innovation Network

Applications for the next cohort of the Women's Innovation Network (WIN) are open through July 1. WIN connects participants to mentors, seasoned professionals, and industry leaders all while offering opportunities to build and practice business skills. The program is open to woman-identified faculty and graduate students who have interest in connecting with private industry or commercializing research. Learn more and apply online.

Office of the Vice President for Research & Innovation (OVPRI) Announces "The Catalyst Fund"

The OVPRI's Innovation Partnerships Services announces a new grant program called The Catalyst Fund, providing financial support to UO innovators for services, tools, and other resources needed to successfully translate their research and launch new UO research-based startup companies. This program's three funding tiers align with different stages in the innovation and company spinout trajectory. Applications are reviewed twice a month and are accepted on a rolling basis.

Research Development & Grant Writing News – June Edition
